"Do not use database objects inside your controllers. They might be converted into Doctrine\DBAL\Connection objects on the fly. This may lead to unexpected results." I want to know where it is written in the documentation. Is there any official documentation which gives explanation of this? A: It's a statement from a book written a long time ago. I think the advice was meant to apply to situations where the client of the controller provided Zend\Db (or Doctrine\DBAL\Connection) instance directly, but it was misapplied. In any event, that is the best advice you can get. Q: applying the sinc function to a column 2d92ce491b
