Using Auto Refresh as a multi-monitor Chrome app is pretty great, since it just seems to work and isn't a hassle like some other multi-monitor solutions. I don't use it to monitor websites, though - that's a job for whatever browser you're using. I have a bit of difficulty with it, as it uses the default browser of each platform to go to a web page, which is a problem for some platforms that use a different default browser than Chrome or Safari. It was actually built before I took over so it's not perfect. I've been working on an "official" website for it for a long time now and I'll announce that sometime in the next year or two. I've been writing all kinds of cool features for it and I'd love to tell everyone about it once it's public and ready for everyone.Q: Is there a way to get a legend to display correctly on a GeoJSON FeatureCollection? I'm having some trouble getting the GeoJSON.Feature.Layers to display the legend on my GeoJSON FeatureCollection. Here's a jsFiddle of the problem: I've tried multiple ways of adding and styling the legend, but haven't found a solution. The only thing that seems to be working is adding the legend outside 1d6a3396d6

What's New in the Auto Web Page Refresh Utility?

Got a mind that thinks and tells everything? Well, by the time you're a full-fledged blogger, you'll be thinking and posting constantly. Take the time to sit back and write once in a while. Schedule your posts at a regular time, and publish on the fly, without ever having to worry about sitting in front of the computer. With iWebBook Writer you don't need a rich knowledge of HTML code to use. Just tell the program how to structure your content, and it will generate a pretty web page, all you need to do is play around with the theme, and place your text where you want it. If you're a bit more experienced with web pages, you'll be able to customize a lot of the appearance, though. You can choose the typography, font, colors, design, background, etc. The good news is that you don't have to limit yourself to one page only, so you can easily lay out a website from the start, and use it as a template, even if you only plan to update content once in a while. Features: This is the latest version of iWebBook Writer, so it features all the new features already seen in the previous ones. The layout engine has been further improved, the ability to move individual paragraphs has been added, pages can be themed, and much more. Furthermore, all the features, such as quick style, word count, email message, etc. have been moved to the tool's preferences page. This way you can easily go back to the old way of working, or try some of the new features, whichever suits you better. Design iWebBook Writer comes as a free app for the Mac, and a trial version for Windows. So you won't need to go into the program to get a feel of how it works, or how it looks like. You can get more info from the following link: iWebBook Writer With iWebBook Writer, you can also create a web page from scratch, and include any URL. This means you can use iWebBook Writer as a standalone application, or as a program to work on web pages from the start. In addition, you can open a web page directly in your browser from the application, which makes it a bit more convenient. Themes You can apply one of the 9 themes to your web page, or create one from scratch. Themes are completely customizable, and you can do anything you want. You can even download themes online, or create your own. Every theme includes a sample web page. So you'll get an idea of what's possible with the application before purchasing one of them.
